5-Year Action Plan (2022-2025) Overview

Affordable Housing Trust Group Agreements

• Be fully present

Limit distractions, show up as fully as possible to the extent that you are able. Take care of yourself as needed.

Use "I" statements (speak based on your own experience)

Speak from your own experience, where you're coming from, rather than projecting your experience onto others. Frame your comments about how you are thinking and feeling, and avoid making assumptions about others and how they are feeling.

• Take space, make space

If you've been speaking a lot, consider listening to others. If you often talk a lot, make sure to share information geared toward the goal of the meeting. If you have not spoken up much, consider speaking up/contributing. Every member's input is valuable.

Share the lesson, not the story (although if there's time, it's helpful to hear the story)

Focus on sharing outcomes and lessons learned. If there is time, sharing the story can be helpful for context and visualize the issue/concern.

One microphone

Talking over others can be very disruptive to the flow of the conversation. If someone is talking, it is important to recognize that they have the proverbial mic and wait for them to finish before you respond or join in.

Joint inquiry over advocacy

Approach our work together as a process of inquiry together and sharing our perspectives. There is a time and a place for advocacy, but we should prioritize exploration of opportunities instead of a competing over ideas.

Use simple, accessible language, avoid jargon or acronyms

Please use simple, accessible language and avoid jargons and undefined acronyms. If you use an acronym, make sure to define it for the group.

• Listen for understanding

Focus on listening and appreciating what others are trying to say, not only what you are hearing.

Offer what you can, don't be afraid to ask for what you need

You are responsible for your actions and for ideas you share. You are also responsible for taking care of yourself in the meeting.

Lean into the edges

Some of our conversations might put us at the end of our comfort zone and trying on new ideas. Some of these conversations might be uncomfortable, and each of us might experience that during a meeting. If you're experiencing discomfort, that's okay. It is often a sign of growth.

Seek to build consensus, but accept and expect lack of closure

We are not always going to solve problems or come to final conclusions in a single meeting. There may be ideas, concepts, conversations that we may want to go deeper with. We hope to be able to do that in future meetings, but it's important to acknowledge that it may not always happen in the span of a single meeting.

• Think outside the box

Sometimes we are used to thinking of certain structures or frameworks for our work. Dare to think outside the structures we are used to and unlock your creative energy.

• Dare to dream

Be bold with your ideas and dare to dream big.

• Everyone contributes energy to this space

We each have our own experience and mood that we contribute to our meeting space. We welcome different energy and strongly feel it will get us closer to our desired outcome.

Mutual respect, always

We respect each other as individuals, and for the perspective that we each bring to our discussions.
